What's new:

by Archy McNally It was early morning, the morning of the day the Viking puts light in the sky. The sky was red, the clouds were black, and the wind was blowing in short, sharp gusts of air. The only thing that wasn't black was the gray ocean lightened up almost to blue, color that reflects from any sail that may happen along out there. The sky was only a few layers of clouds, all fog, nothing more, no satin-white crests at the edge, no hidden cirrus ice crystals dancing along the top surface of the clouds, just a solid sheet of gray that looks down on the land as if in judgment. A fisherman would have to wait until high tide to catch anything big. It was time to fish the seas for small, silvery fishes to keep the fishes growing, small bass that could be tossed from hand to hand without filling anything up, baby pole-cats that could be used to test flashlights for their steady dim light. Satisfied with the look of the day, Archy McNally leaned back on the sidelines, crossed his long legs at the ankles, and took out a handmade cigar that he was more than proud to have made himself. He puffed at it, in a part of it around his mouth, a smell of hazelnuts that might be there if he hadn't dosed it with a little Tabasco while it was cooling down. Closing his eyes, he allowed the smell to fill his nose, and his lips bent into a smile as images of the bygone period filled his mind. The fairways of Punter's Pasture would be coming into bloom in a day or two, the time of wind filled with blowing pinks. The air would be new and wet, the scent of thunder present, but absent. A look around, then Archy stuck his cigar into the grass, took off his smog-coated sunglasses, and cocked his head. My Lord and Lady, he thought, what a beautiful day. It was a day to be remembered. The first boy that Archy met up with was a lanky fellow of well-muscled arms and legs. His water-buffalo coat was affixed to his torso with wide purple straps, a rolled-up, faded Van Dyke was on his head, a curved Navy Sheat, a saloon's crushed-velvet removable revolver in an off-white

Eternity Warriors VR is a definitive VR combat game set in an epic war where the universe is at stake! Eternity Warriors VR is a fast paced multiplayer wave shooter, that takes place on a four dimensional planet in an enormous universe. All the important elements of the Eternity Warriors universe - from the characters, to the weapons, to the arena design - have been recreated in virtual reality. The scenery is rendered in such a way that it feels like you're really there, making the game especially immersive. All the elements that make up a Vanimals game have been faithfully recreated. That means enemies that attack you, traps that you must dodge, weapons that you can aim and fire, and that satisfying clang when you get hit. It also means a large arsenal of fun combat options, from dual wielding and charged attacks to super evasive moves. Every aspect of your gameplay can be turned on or off as well, so you can turn down the graphics and just focus on the fun or just set the sensitivity to the maximum for a crazy, frantic experience. The game takes place on a four dimensional planet in an enormous universe, with an arcade arena whose walls can be repeatedly warped and destroyed. As you run around inside the arena, the walls move towards you and cover you in platforms. Enemies also run around on the platforms, and you must dodge them as they shoot at you and dodge their attacks. The available weapons behave in different ways during gameplay. Some are slower to aim and fire, while others have the ability to aim at multiple enemies at a time and take out multiple enemies at the same time. Each weapon has its own power, ranging from heavy armor-piercing fire to explosive projectiles, to all kinds of entertaining and creative weapons like proton based grenade launchers, turret mounted mini-guns, and laser rifles. Along with the weapons, enemies vary in their complexity: some are unarmored, while others are heavily armored and use a variety of flashy attacks. As you progress through the game, enemies and weapons can be upgraded, giving the game an element of depth and replayability. However, the arena is just the backdrop for all the action. You and your partner can jump in and out of the arena at any time, and you can teleport between the arena and the outside world. This allows you to bypass or hang back from the action and check your weapons, change weapons, or dodge attacks. To make the game even more action packed, you can instantly teleport to a specific spot in the
