What's new in Fadeout: Underground Soundtrack:

- Vol 3, looking at 100 years of dance music, now. We're up to the early '60s, when Poland launched their own dance music as national brand, inspiring hundreds of clubs down until the big economic crisis of 1973. THEN: Careless Talk After a couple years of listening to too many swingsongs, we're ready to get back to the underground. On this volume we're going to cover retro funk, mid-'70s disco, and the even rootsier sounds of the '80s. Today's track, a deep bass track from the '80s, comes from SA, sometimes listed as substitute for Stock Aitken Waterman, sometimes credited as Steve Angelo. Actually the track, called "Tell Me", was recorded in 1983, and the article says that CBS Records finally got this record signed, 25 years after it was first sent their way. The producer?...Steve Angelo as SA. (Sottotitoli italiani link) My lack of Italian is preventing me from doodling, the best I can do is say that it sounds more like Rockit and Chandrajon, both in the "synth sound" category. (Click to see full screen) Sandie, Hellraiser From Dr. 9-11 : Okay, so if we want to go under genres, this is a typical deep funk track, with a thumping bass below 50 and one above 100. Mr. Angelo is clearly the producer. He has good singers, very much in the spirit of disco. The bass really hit the note with a touch of reverb, as if in a small space, an effects which I enjoy a lot. There's a nice melodic synth line, that, well, bass, that can function as a retro new wave light-hearted melody a gal. In English (real or faked accent?!) there are also some well-loved vocabulary, like "raetorous", defining somebody with super-great sex. "Leave a just with Ybor" means, I'm not sure, a they, but among people with Portuguese origin, such as the South American, it may be a they-for-you, a teeny gay guy, as in "Leave a little with me" (ciao, Mr. Angelo, ciao!).
