These compounds are generally categorized as "dioxin-like" compounds, and include a range of compounds which have been shown to exhibit toxic and other adverse effects on the mammals, including effects on the immune system, development, reproduction and behavior. Dioxin-like compounds include certain polychlorinated dibenzo-p-dioxins and dibenzofurans, and certain polychlorinated biphenyls. In addition to TCDD, other dioxin-like compounds have been discovered in the environment, including the undesirable effects on wildlife caused by the presence of PCBs in the Everglades and the rivers of the United States. Therefore, it is desirable to provide methods and compositions to inhibit these other dioxin-like compounds. There are a number of known and commercially-available attempts to control the adverse effects of dioxin-like compounds. For example, certain insecticides such as methoprene ("Metri" or "Metidin" (M. L. Rozenbaum et al., (1994) Pesticide Res. 17:193-197) and pyriproxyfen (U.S. Pat. No. 4,416,749 (1983)) have been used to inhibit dioxin-like compounds. Also, for example, certain flavonoid extracts have been shown to inhibit TCDD (and other dioxin-like compounds), and U.S. Pat. No. 6,410,

The present invention relates to a method of detecting a material for forming a substrate by using a laser beam, more specifically, to the method of detecting a material for forming a substrate by using a laser beam which is suitable for, for example, manufacture of a silicon wafer. In the fabrication of a semiconductor device, a sapphire substrate or a silicon carbide substrate is used as the material for forming a substrate. As for the method of manufacturing the silicon carbide substrate, there is known a method of manufacturing a polycrystalline silicon carbide substrate by forming the polycrystalline silicon carbide substrate on a silicon carbide substrate formed by CVD. In general, there is known a technique of examining the suitability of a material for forming the substrate by analyzing the surface roughness or the like. In this case, the surface roughness of the material for forming the substrate is measured by using a roughness tester. However, in many cases, there is a case where the surface roughness of the material for forming the substrate is not normal. For example, when the conventional line-widths of the semiconductor devices are decreased, it is necessary to decrease the diameter of the silicon wafer. In this case, if the surface roughness of the silicon wafer is increased, the
