[url] double-blind randomized phase 2 trial of doxifluridine plus platinum for head and neck squamous cell carcinoma in a low-risk population (LORENTIN): protocol for a multicenter trial. Standard platinum-based chemoradiotherapy is effective for management of locally advanced, unresectable, or recurrent head and neck squamous cell carcinoma. Because it is toxic, we designed a novel schedule of chemotherapy plus concurrent radiotherapy in this setting. The primary end point is noninferiority of survival based on a preplanned calculation. The primary aim of the study is to show noninferiority of survival. Secondary aims are to assess the toxicity of the treatment regimen and to test for activity against sites outside the treated area. Low-risk head and neck squamous cell carcinoma patients have been enrolled in this study from five radiation oncology centers. After completion of radiation, patients receive chemotherapy for 2 weeks and then undergo chemoradiation. Patients undergo baseline evaluation and therapy in 4-6 weeks. All pretreatment imaging must be done before initiation of therapy. Patients then undergo follow-up evaluations every 6 weeks for the first 3 months, every 3 months for the following 24 months, and every 6 months for a total of 3 years. The primary end point of the study is noninferiority of 2-year overall survival compared with the historical control of patients treated with standard platinum chemoradiotherapy. Secondary end points include overall survival,

But the size of the operation was something else. The rappers and singers, who included Snoop Dogg, Chris Brown and Lil Wayne, and others, had a problem with codeine-laced medicines and were paying up to $40,000 a week to get more, says Ellis, who says he eventually decided to take over the operation himself. He claimed he was unaware that he was supplying narcotics, says Ellis. "I never had any ill intentions," he wrote. "I truly love this trade. I never abused my position. I am a successful businessman." Outside of state prison, Ellis has been accused of other crimes, including an armed robbery involving a gun. He also faced at least two federal charges, including money laundering, in a case related to other drug trafficking cases. All of the federal charges were dismissed, and Ellis was acquitted on a weapons charge in 2015. But in California, he has been convicted of three counts of possession for sale of cocaine, one count of felony distribution of cocaine, and one count of being a felon in possession of a firearm. Last August, he was sentenced to 21 years and eight months in prison, according to prison records. He is scheduled to be released in 2026. If the feds are looking to bring Ellis back to the U.S., there's a good chance that they would first prosecute him in California, says Erika Pinheiro, a federal attorney who heads the drug policy-and-sentencing program at the Cato Institute. A California case would place the other charges Ellis faces in context, allowing for a more compelling argument that Ellis should not be treated as an ordinary career criminal, Pinheiro says. "If he's getting a lengthy sentence in California, I don't think that's a reason to bring him back
