
Cherry Pie V3 Loop 7z

The trail begins to zig-zagged up, descending to the Lyle loop for the loop segment on the west side of the lake. The trail surface is sturdier here as it is more forested. The Lyle loop is two lollipops coming together, with the trails keeping more to the right through the park. The elevation gain from beginning to end is roughly 300 feet. On Cook Mountain there is a loop that begins and ends at the Cook Mountain Nature Center. It is a nice trail for beginning and intermediate hikers. The trail begins near the intersection of Woods Boulevard and North Sheridan Avenue. At the start of the loop, several viewing points are accessible from the trail. The East Loop Trail begins at a sign and goes over two bridges. From there, it goes around the south side of the volcano and continues along the Northwest Loop Trail, eventually looping back to the trailhead. As an alternative, at a fork right after the first bridge, veer left for the Northwest Loop Trail. The loop starts just across the trail from the view of the volcano you're looking at from the lookout. The trails can be combined. The loop ends at a fork. The wide trail goes around the other side of the volcano to the next viewing area at Sunrise, and the path fades from the park. Trailhead is approximately 0.8 mile west of the parking lot for Dogwood Trail. Alternatively: The loop is 15 miles one way. If you only want to hike the north side of the volcano, start at the Loop 7 trailhead and hike north and use the first trail mentioned, the East Loop Trail. From there, either hike the loop clockwise or counterclockwise. For the view of the volcano, take the south side trail, so take Sunrise Trail to the Sunrise lookout.

The restart statement is used to reset a counter and you get a very similar behavior if you use it from 9 to 10 (instead of 0 to 9). The perform statement is the main counter loop which never has a chance to complete (you can try it, but be prepared to press Ctrl-C to abort the run, because this code will just spin forever. counter tries to be incremented from 9 to 10, then the rules of COBOL (and pic 9) truncates the value to 0 and the perform loop never gets a chance to finish. Looping from 0 to 9 over and over again due to the limited storage size (and no size error testing). From the junction at NW 53rd Drive, Leif Erikson Drive continues straight into the top left corner of the loop. Turning right on Leif Erikson Drive will lead the hiker back to Leif Erikson Drive in the bottom right corner. The road is a grassy surface and is only wide enough to accommodate an occasional car. Turn right up Leif Erikson Drive and climb the next hill. Try to take a few minutes to survey the east side of the loop. To the left is a rural neighborhood with many attractive homes. Beyond that is Belmont, with its traffic noise and street lights as well as its signs of human habitation. The first of several power lines cuts through a grove of large hemlocks. You're one of the first people through this part of the loop, and your feeling of being at the center of the forest comforts you. Take a moment to smell the smoke and listen to a neighboring forest. 5ec8ef588b
