Antivirus: This is an antivirus program. Some people confuse it with a firewall.

Anti-Spyware: This is an antivirus program that prevents spyware from installing. Some people confuse it with a firewall.

Anti-Phishing: This is an antivirus program that prevents phishing scams from installing and while it is normally installed along with an antivirus program it is a completely separate program.

Firewall: A firewall is an antivirus program that prevents viruses and unwanted programs from installing on your system and it is usually installed along with an antivirus program. Firewall programs are used to secure your system by blocking out programs that you don't want on your computer. You can also use it to block the use of some programs (such as online games) on your computer. Firewall programs are very different from antivirus programs because they don't protect your computer from viruses and spyware, they prevent your computer from connecting to the Internet when you don't want it to. Firewall programs are more like a telephone safety switch and they are used to secure your computer from many different types of outside threats. Antivirus programs are used to keep track of the viruses and spyware that are on your computer so that you can remove them.

Trusted Security: Trusted Security is an Internet security program that runs in the background to monitor your activity on the Internet and alerts you when it detects that you are using a dangerous or infected site. The program does not stop you from visiting these sites, it just warns you. Trusted Security will also alert you if your credit card information is being sent to a foreign country. If it does detect this activity, it will not allow you to complete the transaction.

IP Reputation: IP Reputation is a new Internet security feature that monitors the sites you visit and notifies you if you visit a site that has been identified as risky by a third party. It uses information collected by several Internet experts, including the Symantec Trustworthy Computing Program (TSP).

Remote Control: Remote Control
